MONDAY, AUGUST 15.

The members of the peace commission should be men who know a good thing when they see it and are not afraid to say so emphatically.

After the hard work and mental strain occasioned by the war, the people of this country will not begrudge the president a vacation, and he can start whenever he gets his collar box packed.

The fixing of the time for holding the Democratic convention on Octobet 8 indicates that the campaign of 1898 in New Mexico will be short and-well, the quality can better be told after the election is over.

The desire of the Americans to keep every island that fell into the hands of the United States has not lessened since the protocol was signed. The peace commissioners, when they meet in Paris, will do well to bear that fact in mind.

Certainly a strange change has come over the political situation in this country. Democratic papers look with favor upon the president's intention to appoint an Ohio Republican to the position of secretary of state, and recommend John Hay as Secretary Day's suc-

The Boston Herald wants the dis position of the Philippine islands submitted to arbitration. The idea that there is anything in the Philippine question to arbitrate will be a surprise to the American people, as the general impression has been that the United States was in a position to do just as was thought best in the matter.

It is only by such occur- Flocks will be multiplied, the amount Marcial. rences that the name of Grover Cleveland, twice president of the United States, is recalled to memory.

The signing of the protocol was the signal for a wonderful revival in business. Capital will now be released from its strong boxes and business enterprises which have been lagging for want of necessary means to prosecute opera- wool are already being made and the uptions will be enabled to extend their scope and enter new fields of enterprise. With the improvement of conditions will come a greater demand for labor, wages will advance, consumption of farm products will increase, prices of commodities will rise with the rise of the wage scale and an era of prosperity will come to the country never before known. Inflation based upon sound money will result from the conclusion of peace, and that manner of inflation is what the people have been waiting for.

One of the pressing needs of the territory at the present time is the election of county commissioners and tax collectors who will enforce the revenue laws impartially and honestly. Under the present system the property owner who refuses to pay taxes for several years and then goes before the board of county commissioners and secures a rebate of from 25 to 50 per cent has a great advantage over the taxpayer who is prompt in paying his obligations for the support of the commonwealth. The fact of the matter is, that if there is any discrimination to be shown the has repudiated the colonel's invidious person who walks into the collector's office and pays his taxes when they are due, should be favored. The day for placing a premium on tax dodging has passed.

A Singular War.

The war with Spain was one of singular and comic situations. Until the United States troops were set out to invade Puerto Rico, presumably no army of invasion ever went into an enemy's country bearing letters of introduction to the principal people of the land to be conquered. And it is not a common occurrence for the commanding officer of an invading army to make a requisition on the home government for a supply of flags for the conquered to display in bonor of being annexed.

At Santiago the scene has been no less remarkable. At one wharf in the harbor Spanish ships bearing Spanish prisoners of war to their homes, gave place in regular and friendly alternation to American ships bearing to a healthier climate the American soldiers who made the Spaniards prisoners And the United States bears the expenses of both shipments. There is no doubt that the troops of both nations commenced and held at Santa Fe, N. M.. And the United States bears the exquit that pesthole, that scene of brave aghting, of triumph and of defeat, with unaffected and probably tumul-

At Manila the scenes have been equally as theatrical. Admiral Dewey's diplomatic hustling of German warships in the Subic bay, the high jinks cut by Agninaldo, and the disgust of the Spanish officers over the failure of the arrival of promised re-enforcements, furnish the material for a comic opera of great drawing powers and side-splitting Nacimiento mountains, qualities. While the war has been an expensive one to this country, and has cost many lives, the many singular happenings such as sinking a powerful fleet with no other damage to the victorious vessels than six men slightly wounded, the inlowers along the line of march of the nyaders, and other events of a like nature will give it a place in the world as one of the merited triumphs of a civilized nation over one that is inhuman n its treatment of subjects.

The Wool Situation.

The future for the American wool grower is growing brighter and brighter. Under the action of the Dingley tariff law the imports of all classes of manufactured woolen goods show an enorforeign competition has falled to create any apprehension in American textile

During the last year the Wilson tariff measure was in operation the imports of woolen goods reached the enormous sum of $49,162,992, which drove woolen manufacturers to despair and threatened the demoralization of the industry. The fiscal year just closed, however, wrought great change, the total imports being less than $15,000,000. This includes, of course, more than $3,000,000 worth of merchandise under this class that was imported during the earlier part of July, 1897, when the Wilson tariff law was still in force. This sum is included in the totals for the year 1898. Deducting the $3,000,000, for which the present administration cannot be justly held responsible, the imports of woolen manufacturers for 1898 represent about onefifth of what they amounted to in the year preceding. In other words, this decrease represents a market for approximately $35,000,000 worth of woolen manufactures that was not available during the year 1896. The importations of foreign wool have declined in even a greater degree than those of manufactured woolens. For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1897, the wool imported amounted to 400,000,000 pounds; for the year ending June 30, 1898, the imports were 135,000,000 pounds, a decline of 265,000,000 pounds. These figures show beyond a doubt that more American woolen goods and more coming year, and so long as the present tariff law is in force, than ever before.

The decrease of importations of wool and woolen manufactures must result in greater activity in American factories, a greater demand for American wool, and a consequent rise in price to sioned a feeling that destiny sometimes ritory of New Mexico this change in the of wool shipped to the eastern markets increased, and the stock of ready money in every town in the territory will be largely augmented. During the war with Spain there was peace is only three days old, a decidedly stronger tone is to be noticed in the wool market. Inquiries for western ward tendency in prices is unmistakable. New Mexico sheep men, from all indications, are promised better times than they have known for many years past.

Roosevelt's Mistake. (Atlanta Journal.)

That Colonel Roosevelt made a mis take when he wrote to Secretary Alger to exalt the "Rough Riders" at 'the expense of all the other volunteers in our army, does not admit of a doubt.

He might have praised his own regi-ment in the highest terms and everybody would have endorsed his tribute but when he declares they are three times as good as any other volunteers, he makes a reckless and utterly unjustifiable statement. Colonel Roose velt has seen only a small part of our volunteer troops in action. He has no means of forming a judgment as to what they would do. The only fair presumption is that they would bear themselves like men.

But in the battle where the "Rougl Riders" did such gallant fighting Colonel Roosevelt dia see other volunteer who fought quite as well as his own regiment. The 2nd Massachusetts ex-hibited these soldierly qualities quite as high as those of the "Rough Riders." comparison in very emphatic language

One of Colonel Roosevelt's own men Fe. N. M., who was one of the first volunteers for the regiment of "Rough Riders," and was sworn in by Roose-velt, says of the latter's letter to Secretary Alger:

The young woman's face was aglov with excitement and joyful anticipation as she came in and sat down beside th desk of the veteran traveling man. "Oh, Mr. Brown," she exclaimed, "at last I'm to be given my way, and I'm just too delighted for anything! I've argued all along that there was no reason why I couldn't sell goods on the road just as well as if I were a man, and the firm has consented to let me try it if you will lay out a trip for me and give me all the nee essary pointers in regard to the people.

The veteran traveling man laid aside his cigar as a mark of special courtesy and then got out a bundle of time tables and

'Well, I'll try to fix it so that you'll get it," he told her, and he winked at the other veteran again. Then he spread out the map and ran a pencil mark through the various cities she was supposed to take in. "The first one," he said, "is dead easy. You get there early in the afternoon, and the only man you have to see is old Tompkins. He's a mark. He'll start in by telling you he doesn't want a thing in your line, but if you go at him right you can fix him with about three gin fizzes so that you can sell him most anything you

"Three what?" "Gin fizzes. The old man thinks there's nothing like a gin fizz, and if you humor him and tell him that they probably make finer gin fizz in the little place next to his store than is made in all Chicago he'll warm up to you and you can sell."

"But, don't you see, I can't very well" 'That's so. You can't, can you?" broke n the veteran. "I never thought of that. Well, then, I can't give you any pointers on Tompkins. You'll have to do the best you can on your own hock. But you eedn't waste much time, even if you don't sell to him. "Three in the morning!" she exclaimed

Why, I'-"Oh, of course it's not much fun," in terrupted the veteran, "but it saves you over half a day, and you'll find half days count on the road. However, you won't have the gin fizz question to bother you. Bob Billings, the only merchant there who does much in our line, is a teetotaler. But you'll have to load him up with ci He thinks that's what traveling men are for, and he's a regular fiend on the subject of smoking-always trying a new brand of tobacco or a new cigar of some sort. I've had to give him more good cigars and smoke more cheap ones in order to sell bim a-but, walt a minute. Perhaps I'm getting a little too fast again. Still that's the only way I know of selling him anything, and maybe you'll have to get on to the next town without having a chance to even get out your samples. 'How can I get to the next town?" she asked in a tone that indicated she was getting somewhat discouraged.

"Drive over. It will only take about an hour to finish up your business when you get there, and I guess that's a good thing, too, for the man you have to sell to there

"Couldn't I skip that town?" "Impossible. He's been doing business with us for eight years, and the firm never would get over it if we lost his trade. However, you can get right out of town as soon as you have sold to him, and I tell you the next stop is a hummer. We sell to three firms there, and the head of the biggest one is a poker flend from the top of the creek. If you want to do business with him, you'll have to sit in with his little party at the hotel, and if the game breaks up before 7 a. m. it will be the first time on record, and if they don't best you out of everything you've got, including your sample case, it'll be because you can play poker better than they can and are on to all the tricks. Why, what in thunder has become of that woman?' Then the veteran again winked at the other veteran, and a little later the senior partner drifted back that way and remarked casually:

A woman never does know her own mind, does she? That little Miss Sweet has been trying for two years to get me to let her go out with a sample case, just to show the absurdity of sex distinctions even in that branch of the business, and now that I have decided to give her a chance she suddenly turns round and declares that she will resign before she will do such an unwomanly thing. Oh, these women are all puzzles-the very worst kind of

"That's what they are," assented the veteran traveling man. Then he winked several times in rapid succession at the other veteran.-Ex

WARM WEATHER ATTIRE.

Thin Apparel For the Hottest of Hot

How to keep cool is a problem which perplexes many women who suffer intense ly from warm weather, yet do not wish to spend their summer in the seclusion of their bedroom and a lawn wrapper. Thin underwear, if cambric or lawn, is of course an understood thing, and openwork corsets, the shorter the better, should be adopted, as thereby much discomfort is escaped. The variety known as the cycling or riding corset is hardly more than a girdle and is comparatively cool. So much transparent fabric is worn this summer that there are sheer dimities with out number to choose from, and thin grenadines also, but if these are still too thick white or cream dotted wash net found entirely satisfactory. It must be made without a lining, of course, and may be prettily shirred and gathered. A silk underdress is not at all requisite and adds much to the heat of the costume, beneath which a pretty muslin petticoat and corset cover will have an equally good effeet. Of course such a gown can only be worn in the house, as transparent cos-tumes are in the worst taste for the street, even in the country. These dresses of cot-ton net are cooler than those of silk, which require silk beneath and have the additional advantage of laundering to perfec
